Profile: Julian Smith

I have been a member of Clovelly Country Club since April 2018, and over that time it has become a place I genuinely value, not just for the golf but for the people, the history and the character of the club. Clovelly has a unique identity and spirit, and I have great respect for the care and effort that generations of members have put into building and protecting it.

By profession, I am a senior executive, business owner and investor, with experience across both listed and private companies. I currently serve on several private company boards and have been closely involved in strategic decision-making, financial oversight and governance over many years. I have also sold a business to a listed company, which gave me practical exposure to the disciplines and responsibilities that come with public company governance, while continuing to invest in and support private businesses over the long term.

Outside of work, golf is an important part of my life, and Clovelly is firmly my golfing home. I have a strong appreciation for the traditions of the game, the challenges and quirks of the course, and the importance of maintaining a club culture that is welcoming, fair and member-focused. I believe good clubs thrive when decisions are made thoughtfully, with the long-term interests of the membership and the club always front of mind.

I would consider it a privilege, if elected, to serve on the committee and to contribute my time and experience to Clovelly's future, supporting sensible decision-making, respecting the club's founding ethos, and helping ensure that Clovelly continues to prosper while remaining true to what makes it special.

Fraternitas Ludorum.
